"In late 1975, I moved back to Toronto after living in Los Angeles for six years. Mandala, Bush, The James Gang and the Guess Who were all behind me. I wasn't sure what I wanted to do musically, but I knew I needed a band which would have the ability to fuse many different elements into something unique. As I settled back into "Toronto Life", I started checking out musicians at clubs, jam sessions, booze cans and just about anywhere else you could hear and make music."

"By February of 1976, the first incarnation of The Domenic Troiano Band was in place. The next four years were some of the most creative and exciting times of my life. I was surrounded by great musicians, who gave the band their heart and soul. Even though members changed from time to time, the level of musicianship and friendship stayed high. It was wonderful to have a group of players, that were always ready and able to experiment and develop new ideas."

"This compilation includes music from "Burnin' At The Stake", "The Jokes On Me", "Fret Fever", and two songs that were recorded live and never previously released. I would like to thank all the great musicians, singers, producers, engineers, and everyone else who made the music possible."

"I will always look back at this time, as a special period of my life. Thanks for listening!"
